

Carbonite and Iron Mountain Expand Strategic Partnership

November 29, 2018

Alliance further safeguards critical data for customers

BOSTON, Nov. 29, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Today, Carbonite, Inc. (NASDAQ: CARB), a global leader in data protection, and Iron Mountain Incorporated (NYSE: IRM), the global leader for storage and information management services, announced the expansion of their strategic partnership. Iron Mountain plans to integrate the Carbonite Data Protection Platform into its Iron Cloud platform, enabling businesses to safeguard and improve recoverability of their mission-critical data across all IT environments in the event of data loss, disaster or cyber-attack.

The Carbonite Data Protection Platform allows businesses to deploy data protection solutions for their systems across physical and virtual environments. From backup for physical servers to high availability for critical workloads, data migration solutions to endpoint protection, Carbonite's comprehensive platform provides a robust data protection strategy for today's growing businesses.

With this partnership, Iron Mountain will host the Carbonite Data Protection Platform in its enterprise-class Iron Cloud within its data centers. Iron Cloud is a data management platform that delivers confidence in the integrity, availability and protection of critical data, enabling organizations to mitigate risk, increase operational efficiency and drive value from data. With Iron Cloud, organizations can deploy a hybrid data management strategy for their multi-cloud environments with the appropriate cost, performance and security for each storage tier.

"Our customers trust us to keep their information safe, secure and available, regardless of what it is or where it is stored," said Ray Aschenbach, Senior Vice President and General Manager, Digital Solutions, Iron Mountain. "We deliver on that trust through a combination of innovative solutions and strategic relationships with leaders like Carbonite. Combining the power of Carbonite's comprehensive data protection platform with Iron Cloud and our secure data centers, we can offer enhanced protection to our customers across their critical systems."

"We're looking forward to expanding our partnership with Iron Mountain," said Tim Puccio, Vice President, Global Alliances at Carbonite. "Together, we will continue to provide solutions that will safeguard data."
